The last 5 years has seen the rise of "cliffhanger" films and more action oriented films than ever before in cinema history. As a result, the mid-budget films that have always been the bread and butter of most film makers have been going out of production and reducing their number in the industry, however there is still some innovative and talented filmmakers out there who are breaking out and giving the masses something they have never seen before. Here is a list of the most ambitious, high concept and unusual movies of 2011. This list will consist of movies that were extremely unconventional in their plots, many of which had a weird visual style, unique themes, or at least some other quality that makes them stand out from the rest. These are the movies that make you sit up and take notice because they may have something new to offer the world of cinema. 1. Red – Director - David Sandberg. This is the first in what will hopefully be a series of horror films that Sandberg has completed by 2010. The story follows a boy who is stalked by a mysterious masked figure throughout his childhood and teenage years. The film uses a 3-D style to create a surreal environment which is then interspersed with moments of realism to cause further fear and tension. It's a highly original and innovative concept and very well crafted. 2. The Beast – Director - Aleksandar Hemon. Aleksandar Hemon's second film is a documentary about a man who sets out to find the beast that has plagued him for his entire life. This journey takes him on a daring and dangerous journey into the Siberian wilderness, where he encounters a plethora of characters who bring a lot to light about the character's life. 3. Om Shanti Om – Director - Anurag Basu. Om Shanti Om is one of the most talked about films of the past few years. It tells the story of a Bollywood star played by Shahrukh Khan, who is killed in an accident that was staged to look like a murder. The film then follows two characters: the superstar's son who is played by Katrina Kaif, who has been promised to the star's wife who is played by Deepika Padukone. The film is the classic heist-comedy about the rivalry that develops between the two characters and their inability to forget about the love that they have for the other. 4. The Act of Killing - Director - 82157476af
